

Life Of River

From a great height, in a land of snow
Twinkles a glittering drop, there I begin my show
A drop over drop makes me grow
Motherly hills gift me with eternal flow

There I flow over steep rock
Along green bushes I flow and talk
You might be wondering how I look
I am now a small baby brook

Life is worthless without a direction
There's where my father, riverbed comes in action
I am water, he is sand, that's what you all call
Yes we are separate, but yet inseparable

There in plains I become wide and strong
Now my chatter turns to melodious song
The sunshine gives me ultimate spark
There's where lovely green trees mark

Through green fields I make my way
Quenching nature's thirst, mother they say
I miss my mother now I begin my call
There's where motherly rain begins to fall

Now I see another mighty river
There's where we join together
I call him my lovely brother
We promise to be forever

Now I am too wide and slow
It seems this is end for my flow
I am now weak and old
My father river bed has left his hold

There's the last place now I reach
My life has now nothing to teach
A very new world now I see
And it's a mighty deep blue sea

Tantreshwar Jha