

Just Breathe

In the race with the fear of defeat
With miserable hurdles now I compete
In the running world now, I dive
To get my part now I strive

Increasing pace by seeing other's run
That's what now mankind had to learn
But wait! came the commanding voice
Just breathe, be away from the noise

The breeze then held my wrists
It drank my sweat with its cool mists
I took the seat over the grassy ground
With the roses and mighty trees all around

I closed my eyes; musical world began it summon
As loving as mother, its innocent love of someone
I began the search of love with a crawl
It's song of my motherly innocent waterfall

Stood on emerald ground, with diamond drops beneath
Her beautiful song just asked me to breathe
Came the shine of smile over my face
With her blessings now I again pace

Tantreshwar Jha