

Just Smile

With the wrath of storm, I fight
With my heart submerged in fright
With the eyes starving for a peaceful light
The rain of sorrow, thunder cry for heavenly might

With every tormenting gust my emotions break
Where the roof of hopes seems to turn fake
Where peaceful emerald trees performing dance of death
Where my blessed memory forest losing its strength

The melodious song of river turned to a roar
With the angry waves sinking the shore
But wait there comes a smiling warrior
With his healing eyes, he seems a savior

With no weapons also he chose to fight
There he opened heavenly eyes for morning light
There came a soothing and desired dawn
With the corpse of storm lying down

There rolled tear of thanks from emerald leaves
Now my whole inner beauty took the breath of peace
The tired and thirsty warrior went to bank of melody
He is your smiling face, the unarmed smiling remedy

Tantreshwar Jha